Manhattan Moment

On the shore of Stockdale Park there is only natural beauty. Edging against toes and evening-out sand is a mirror of translucent liquid. Within its reflection are trees of emerald, ruby, and gold. Flecks of this treasure fall from limbs, a mess to be gathered and cleared at home, but a natural degradation of life to...

November is a month when we are told to be thankful—thankful for the seasons, the harvest, and people. As an act of thanks, we also remember. We remember those that have sweat and bled in fields of farms and war. Like fallen leaves, they are silent. Nevertheless, the beauty of their hard work and sacrifice linger, inspiring noble acts of giving and kindness.

In this month, of change, silence, reflection, and thankfulness, share with others that which you have received. Be a living monument of thankfulness for those quietly reminding us of the beauty all around.
